

Dear Friends.

In 2015, the Foundation completed a 5-year grantmaking plan focused on "helping people in poverty attain economic stability." It was a productive five years that saw the Foundation launch and/or support a number of notable efforts.

- The Phillips Sectoral Employment Initiative (PSEI) helped build the capacity of a number of local nonprofit employment training providers, positioning them to be state and national leaders in implementing emerging Career Pathways strategies.
- The Blue Line Coalition sparked greater community-based learning and advocacy in North Minneapolis around proposed transit investments.
- The MATSH system now provides more efficient access to supportive housing around the state through one database of opportunities accessible to housing locators and case managers.
- We helped launch MSPWin (Workforce Innovation Network), a funders collaborative focused on improving the workforce system so that all members of the community have access to quality employment opportunities that strengthen our region.
- We supported increased resources for affordable housing through Homes for All.
- We piloted a strategy to support college success for African American males through the Eddie Phillips Scholarship for African American Men.

Although these efforts bring much to be proud of, as we concluded this 5-year plan, we wondered whether our limited resources could have greater impact if they were targeted more specifically to fewer, bolder strategies. This question and subsequent conversations led us to explore a human-centered design approach to developing fundable strategies. With this approach, we believe that the best way to determine these targeted strategies is to create them in dialogue with the individuals and communities we seek to support. The days of generic solutions or "outsiders know best" have passed. The stakeholders closest to the issues must be engaged and valued in order to create new and formidable solutions to deeply entrenched community issues.

As a result, the 2015 annual report is fairly "bare bones." We believe the better story to tell will be in our 2016 annual report when we can coalesce learnings and results from our last five years and provide direction for our next 5-10 years based on the planning work initiated in 2016. We have, however, included a story about the various funder collaborative efforts in which we are engaged. These efforts have allowed the Foundation to magnify our efforts working with others around issues we care about.

So as we pause to reflect on another year of grantmaking and community impact, we continue to be grateful for the many community partners and grantees with whom we are privileged to work. Their dedication, vision and collaborative spirit inspire and inform us every day. We are also thankful for our tremendous staff - Patrick Troska, Joel Luedtke, Tracy Lamparty, Elizabeth Coco and Emma Olson – who do their work with excellence, determination and humility.

As the economy improves, it is clear that too many continue to be left behind, especially if you're a person of color or living with generations of poverty. Our hopes and ambitions as a region will never be realized as long as opportunity is not authentically and realistically extended to all, and as long as racism plagues our institutions and mindsets. These are matters that deeply concern us, and we have made a commitment to address them wherever we have influence, including within our own Foundation and its practices. We invite you to travel this journey with us as we look to transform not only our work but how we interact with and respond to the community.

With Sincere Gratitude.

Magnifying Impact Through Funder Collaboratives

Funder collaboratives are not new to philanthropy. It seems like more and more foundations are finding more and more ways to work collectively on shared interests. Fundamentally, a funder collaborative brings a number of philanthropic entities together to focus their collective human and financial resources on an issue of shared interest. The best funder collaboratives coalesce around an issue of community urgency where individual interests can be magnified for greater impact collectively. But funders are not just one more group working on an issue. Rather, funders working in a collaborative understand the unique contribution that philanthropy can play in addressing an issue that cannot be accomplished by government, the nonprofit sector or the community alone. Each collaborative will define this "unique contribution" for itself, but it usually involves using philanthropic resources, influence and big picture knowledge in innovative ways that a single foundation either can't muster or can't stomach.

Over the years, the Foundation has found its way into several collaboratives. Below are descriptions of those in which we're currently engaged. We share these with you to draw attention to the collective work around a multiplicity of issues, and because we believe we are magnifying our limited resources for greater community benefit through these efforts.

Central Corridor Funders Collaborative is a group of local and national funders working with others to unlock the transformative potential of the new light rail transit line along the Central Corridor between Saint Paul and Minneapolis. The Collaborative was formed because funders believed in the Light Rail Line's potential for benefiting the people and places closest to the line. They envision stable, thriving neighborhoods throughout the Central Corridor that reflect community identities and link all people to regional opportunities CENTRAL CORRIDOR

Heading Home Minnesota Funders Collaborative includes many of the State's most recognized foundations and intermediaries who align their efforts with Minnesota's State Plan to Prevent and End Homelessness. By marshaling resources and aligning investments, collaborative members amplify the work of public agencies and the private and philanthropic sectors to replace the revolving door of housing instability with a front door to a safe, stable home for all Minnesotans. Member since 2013.

According to a 2012 Connect US Fund report, there are four significant benefits of a donor or funder collaborative:

- Knowledge sharing foundations share innovation and best practices regarding what's working in a given field. They also spend more time in deep learning about an issue.
- Shared risk when funds are pooled or "big ideas" shared, risk is shared across many stakeholders. This also allows for more creative grantmaking, stretching individual grantmakers' tolerance for
- Greater impact the magnified attention on an issue provides the leverage to increase overall impact.
- Identifying emerging issues the more foundations learn about an issue and work together, the more opportunity will arise to identify emerging issues where collective action can be impactful.

The Minneapolis St. Paul Workforce Innovation Network is a philanthropic collaborative formed to strengthen the workforce in the seven-county Minneapolis Saint Paul region through 2020. Due to significant economic changes and demographic trends occurring now and in the future, funders believe that targeted action with regards to workforce is required for our region to stay competitive and our businesses to thrive over the longterm. These actions are also necessary to carry out the shared priorities of the member philanthropic organizations to reduce poverty and promote economic MSPWin opportunity for all.

Member since 2013.

Northside Funders Group members bring a depth of experience and commitment to North Minneapolis, a willingness to go beyond the grant, and a belief that North Minneapolis has the capacity to thrive through their collective impact agenda. These assets, leveraged by its partners, position the collaborative to ensure that it achieves the vision of northside North Minneapolis as a thriving,

Financial Statements

Basis of Presentation

The Foundation's financial statements are prepared on the basis of accounting used for excise tax purposes. Under these principles, certain revenues and related assets are recognized when received rather than when earned, and certain grants, awards and expenses are recognized when paid rather than when the obligation is incurred. The unrestricted net assets with investments at fair value are shown, as supplementary information. Complete financial statements are available upon request from the Foundation office.

Grantmaking Priorities 2010-2015

Our primary focus is on efforts that "help people in poverty to attain economic stability." We do this through a few discrete strategies in:

enable individuals with low incomes and low skills to advance towards stable, living wage careers

Housing

access to quality affordable housing that provides a stable foundation for future success ensure that all low-income youth can earn a world class education that prepares them for lifelong success

Transit

access to affordable transportation to get to work and meet daily needs

- Advocacy for LGBT rights
- Advancing equity for all races and religions
- Access to affordable reproductive health services

In addition, we make three other kinds of grants for which unsolicited proposals are not accepted.

- Support for the Field grants
- Trustee-directed grants
- Legacy grants

Our primary grantmaking geographic focus is the seven-county metropolitan area including Anoka, Carver, Dakota, Hennepin, Ramsey, Scott and Washington Counties of Minnesota.
